DETAILED ACTION

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on September 29, 2005 has been entered.
2. Claims 1, 3, 4, and 6 are pending in this application.

Response to Arguments/Amendment

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1, 3, 4, and 6 have been considered but are moot in view of new grounds of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.
5. Claims 1, 3, 4, and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Swart, U.S. Patent No. 6,347,306.

Regarding to claims 1 and 3, Swart discloses a system for administering employee funds, system comprising:

at least one access point configured to interface with an employee, the employee associated with a worksite employer having an obligation to remit employee funds to the employee (figure 2, item 250; column 7, lines 44-47 and column 14, lines 20-25; each employee is provided with on-line access to securely log onto a website associated with the banking computer system 250 to check on and verify the provision of the net work segment pay to the employee's bank account; employer associated with the employee remits salary to the employee's bank account);

a personal financial service provider configured to communicate with worksite employer and at least one access point over a network (figure 2, the banking system 250 communicates with the payroll processing system 230 and the employee 258), said personal financial service provider including a data center configured to store financial data associated with the employee (column 13, lines 47-52; the banking computer communicates with a computer storage device which stores shift completion information, pay amount information, pay deduction information and net work segment pay of the employee), wherein said personal financial service provider is configured to electronically receive the employee funds directly from worksite employer and to electronically disburse the employee funds to third parties prior to allowing the employee to disburse funds via access point (column 7, lines 32-47; the banking system deposits the net pay directly into the employee's account, withdraws, e.g. 2% of the employee's pay and automatically deposits the money into a mutual fund); said personal financial service provider configured to administer at least one benefits program associated with the employee (column 7, lines 30-47; the bank administers the employee's bank account 245, deposits the net pay directly into the employee's account, provides the employee with the ability to check the bank account on-line, deposits money into employee's mutual fund).

Swart does not disclose the personal financial service provider configured to electronically receive a fee from the worksite employer, wherein the fee is responsive to the disbursal of the employee funds, and the fee is a percentage of a gross payment amount associated with the employee. However, Official Notice is taken that it is old and well known in the art that a bank electrically charges a fee for a customer when the customer performs funds transferring and the fee is equal to a certain percentage amount of money transferred. For example, when a customer makes a funds transfer from the customer's checking account to the other person's account, the bank debit a fee equal to 3% of the amount of funds transferred from a client's checking account. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one with ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Swart's to adopt the well known feature above for the purpose of allowing the bank to make profit by collecting service fee when performing service on behalf of an employer.

Swart discloses personal financial service provider configured to interface with the employee to provide at least one of: direct purchase of goods and services, direct purchase of travel services, or direct purchase of investment instruments (column 12, lines 15-23; the bank advertises new services and products to its customers). Swart does not disclose the goods and services come from one of the third parties. However, Official Notice is taken that it is old and well known in the art that advertising goods and services on behalf of third parties over the Internet. For example, the famous yahoo.com website advertises goods/services on behalf of merchants, the website contain links or logos of various merchants so the user can click on a link to select a merchant to direct purchase good or services from that merchant. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one with ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Swart's to adopt the well known feature above for the purpose of allowing the bank to make profit by advertising goods/services on behalf of merchants.

Regarding to claim 4, Swart does not disclose the personal financial service provider pays, for employee, federal taxes associated with the employee funds. However, Swart discloses the human resource computer system stores the withholdings of federal and state taxes of the employee (column 6, lines 28-36), the payroll processing computer system calculates the tax deductions for the employee (column 7, lines 1-20), the banking system retrieves net work segment pay from the payroll processing system for issue a check or directly deposit to the employee's bank account (column 7, lines 30-47). The payroll processing computer system deducts the federal and state taxes from the employee's net pay, thus it is obvious that the banking system pays federal taxes associated with the employee net pay. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one with ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to incorporate this feature with the modified Swart's above for the purpose of providing more convenient to employee in paying federal taxes associated with the employee net pay.

Regarding to claim 6, Swart discloses wherein the at least one access point includes a Web-based interface (column 7, lines 44-47; employee can check the bank account on-line via a web browser).
